

In that same Federalist Paper, Madison wrote:

Instead of being analogous to the power of declaring war, [the president's power as commander in chief] affords a striking illustration of the incompatibility of the two powers in the same hand. Those who are to conduct a war, cannot, in the nature of things, be proper or safe judges, whether a war ought to be commenced, continued, or concluded. They are barred from the latter functions by a great principle in free government, analogous to that which separates the sword from the purse, or the power of executing from the power of enacting laws.

Jews and Christians Against a Mideast War

I was pleased to facilitate, and to sign, an ad that ran on the op-ed page of the New York Times last month. It denounced the smear of anti-Semitism used on war opponents, and noted that "America can only be harmed by this war. Our kids killed, our liberties suppressed, our taxes raised, the government engorged, the recession deepened, our Constitution shredded." It urged those "salivating for war" to "buy rifles and parachute into Baghdad. But not to kill our soldiers and wreck our economy." The promoters of the war want a "New World Order," said the ad. We believe in the "old American republic."

Co-chairmen of the new group are Burt Blumert of the Center for Libertarian Studies and Lew Rockwell of the Mises Institute. Other signers included: Professor Richard M. Ebeling of Hillsdale College, Professor Paul Gottfried of Elizabethtown College, Professor Edward Kaplan of Western Washington University, Dr. Gary North of Remnant Review, entrepreneur James Rodney, and Professor Murray N. Rothbard of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

The committee has a small deficit. To help, and to join, send dues of $50 to JCAMW, PO Box 2802, Auburn, AL 36830.

Duke lost the election, but he scared the blazes out of the Establishment. If the official Republican hadn't been ordered to drop out, he might have won. Certainly there would have been a run-off.

Duke's platform called for tax cuts, no quotas, no affirmative action, no welfare, and no busing. "Tonight, we
